A Great Achievement

Malavath Poorna climbed Mount Everest when she was only thirteen years old. This amazing girl was born in India in 2000. She comes from a poor village in an area with no hills or mountains.

A teacher spotted her talent when she was climbing a rock and encouraged her to develop her skills.

She trained for eight months before completing her climb of Mount Everest. She's the youngest girl in the world to do so. When asked why she climbed such a difficult mountain at such a young age, she said, "to prove that girls can do anything." Poorna now dreams of climbing the seven highest summits of the seven continents. So far, she has completed three, including Everest.
