Look at That!

I press my nose up against the glass and stare into the deep blue water. There are so many beautiful sea creatures. There is always something new to see. "Mom—look at that! There's a jellyfish."

"Wow! Its body is so clear, you almost can't see it," says Mom.

A tiny, striped seahorse swims right past my eyes. Then two sea turtles dive down toward the bottom. It looks like they're smiling. I smile back.

Meanwhile, inside the aquarium …

"Wow, look at that one, Dad," I say. "The one with the blue eyes—it's showing its teeth to us."

"Amazing!" says Dad. "There's always something new to see."
