

The three little pigs, Percy, Peter and Patrick, are in the house. They are hungry.

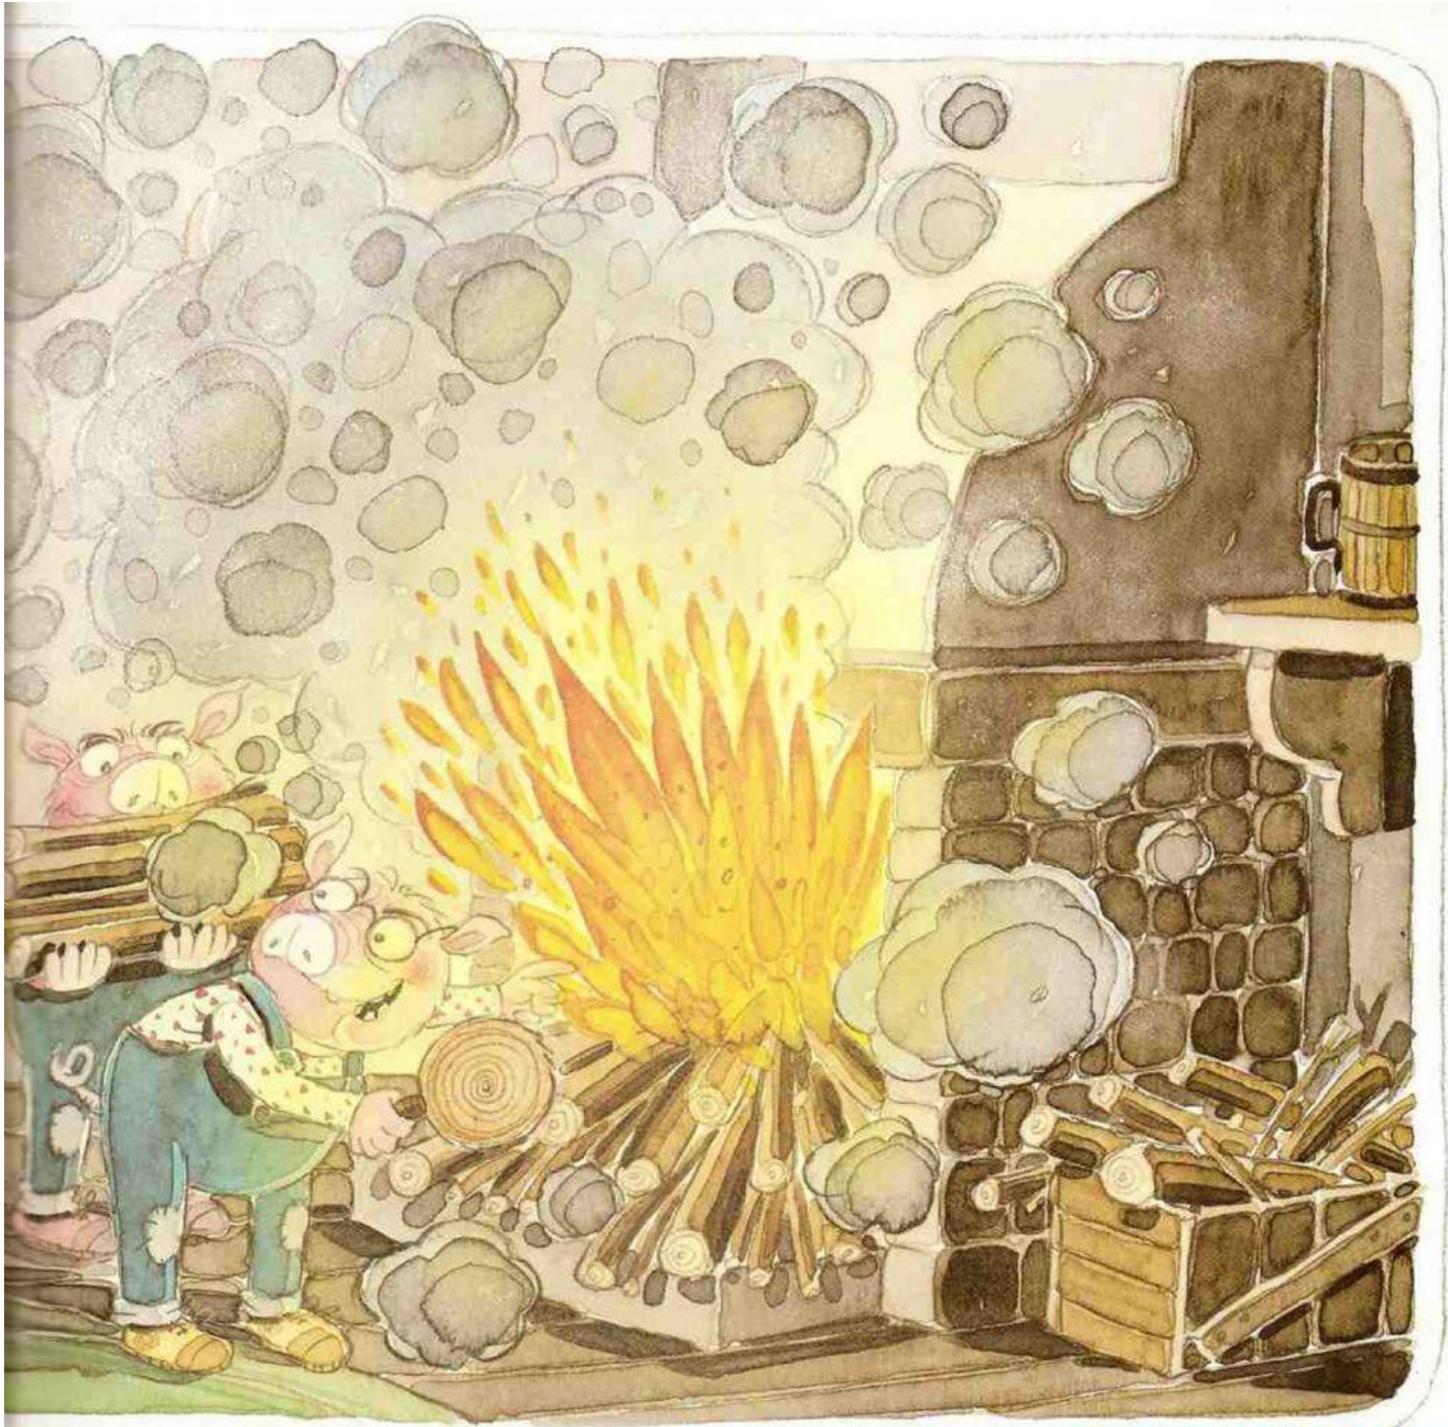

'The wolf is waiting. We can't go out. We can't get dinner,' says Percy.

'What can we do?' asks Peter.

'Don't be sad. It's OK,' says the clever pig, Patrick. 'I've got an idea. Let's make a fire.'

The three little pigs make a big fire.

The three little pigs are in the house. There is a lot of smoke from the fire.

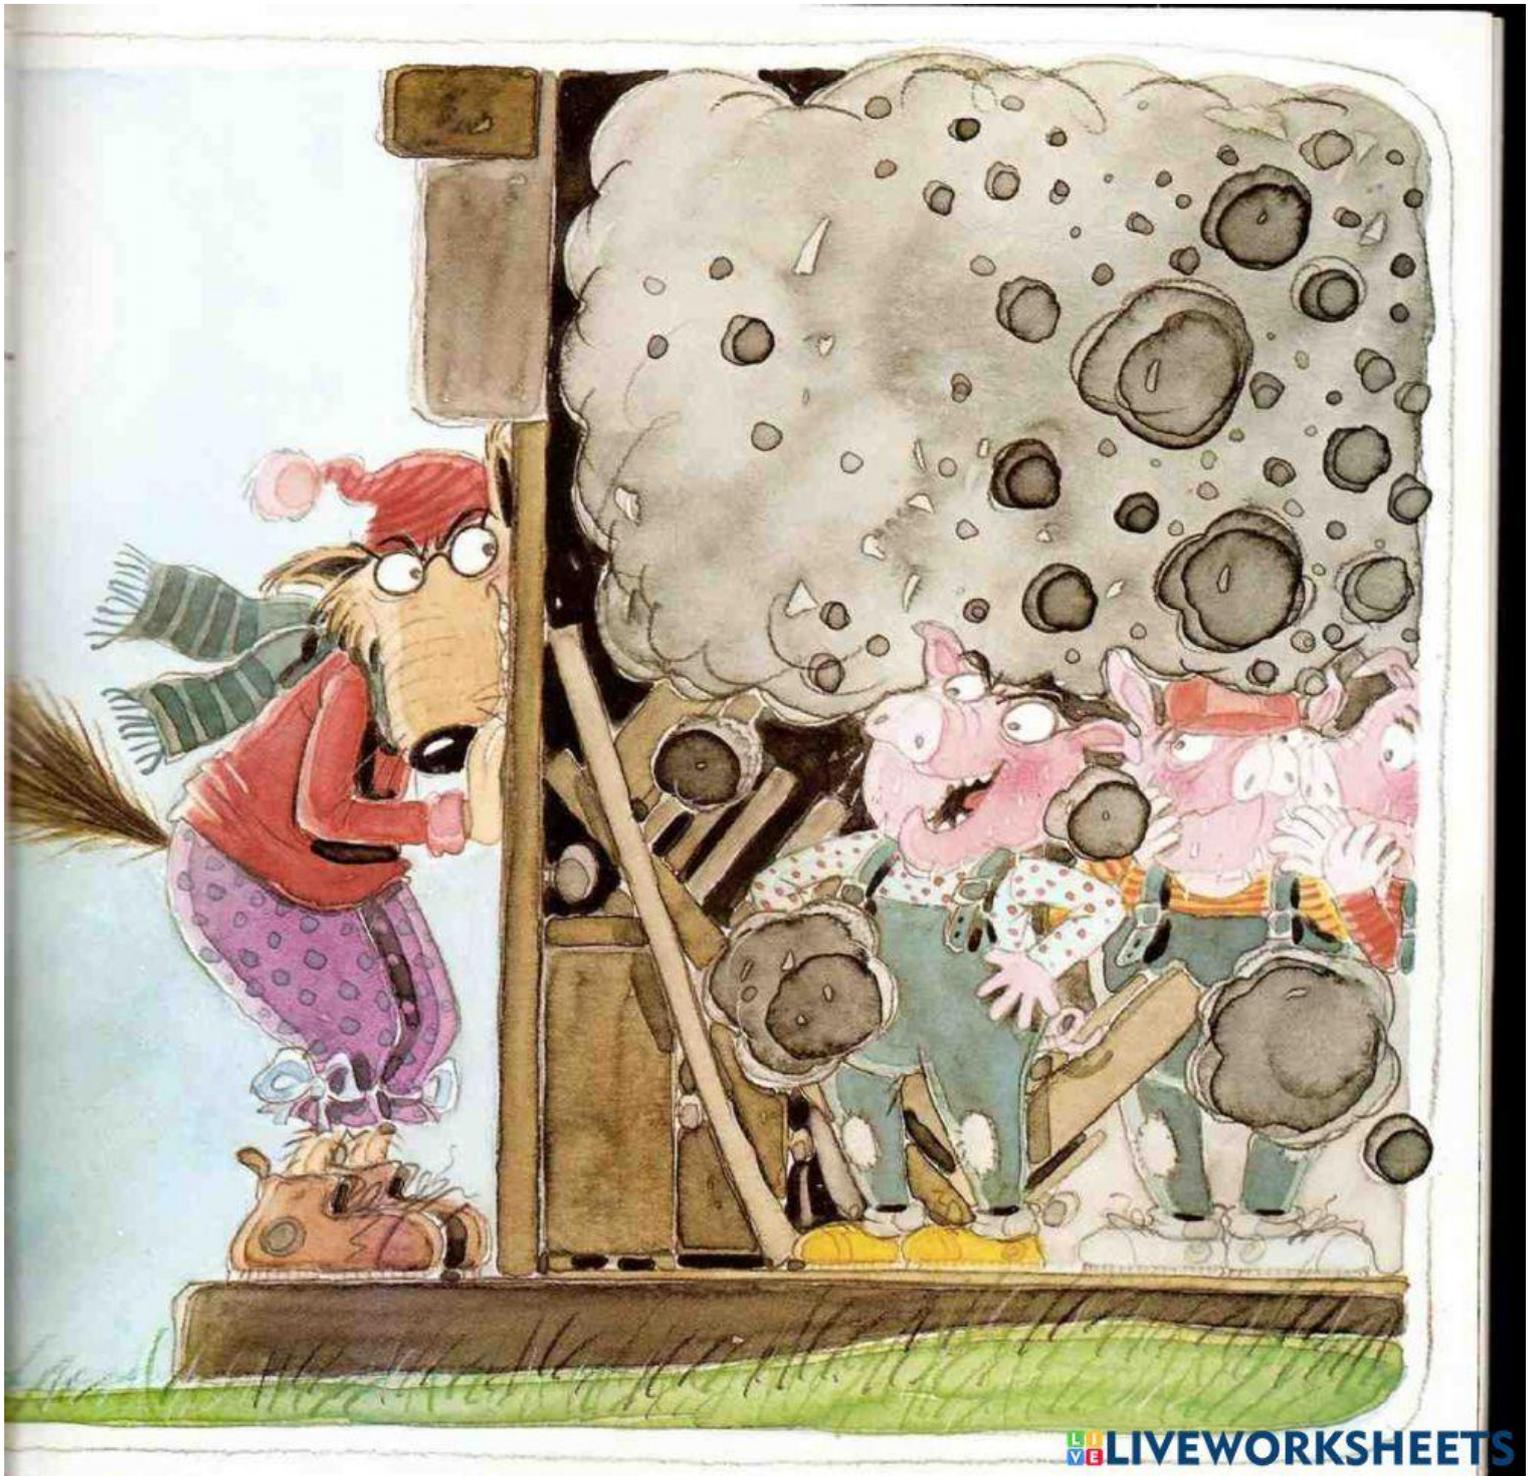

'Oh no! We can't go out! What can we do?' says Peter.

'It's OK,' says Patrick, 'Listen and watch ...'

He goes to the door and he shouts, 'The wolf is waiting. He isn't very clever. He can come down the chimney and eat us.'

The wolf is listening. 'That's a good idea,' he thinks.

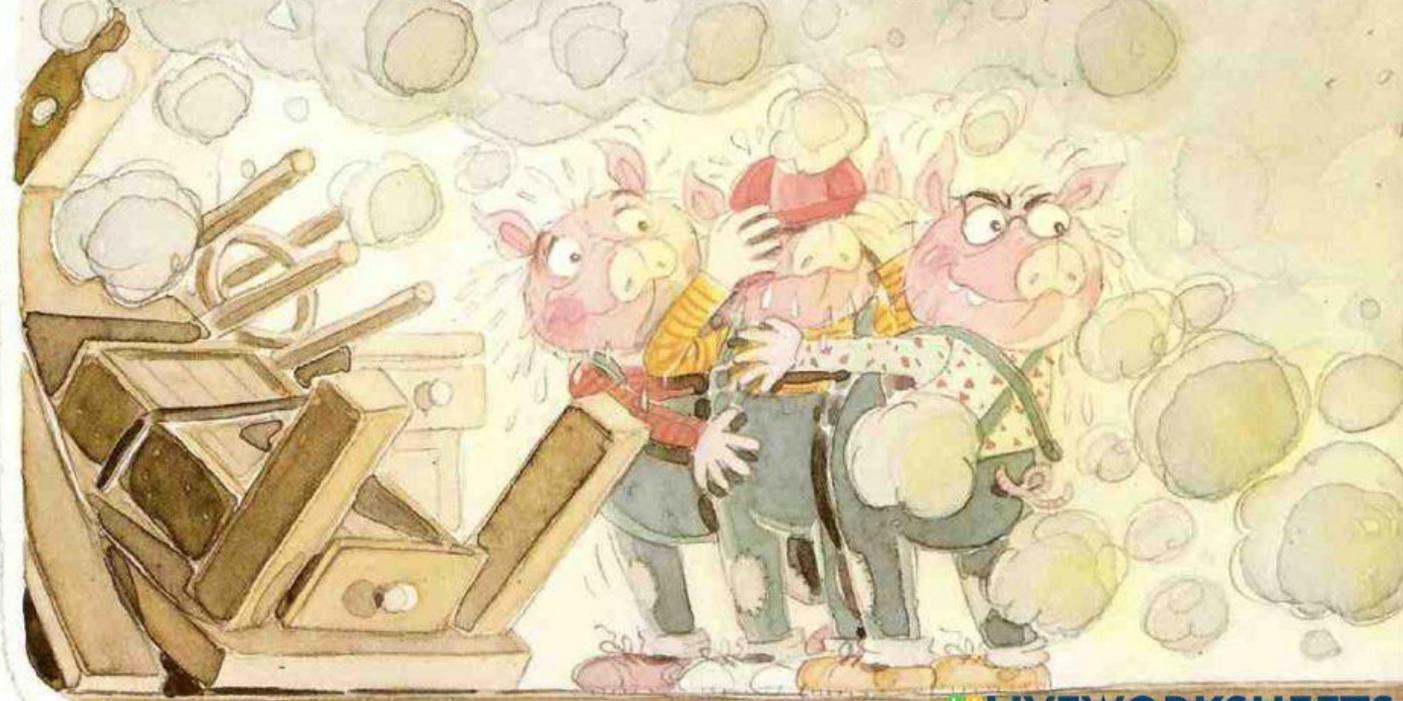

'I'm a clever wolf,' thinks the big bad wolf.
'I don't want to wait here. I want to eat the pigs.'

He goes down the chimney.

The three little pigs hear the wolf in the chimney. They wait ... there is a big CRASH! The big bad wolf falls into the fire!

Oh dear! The poor wolf!

The three little pigs are very happy because the wolf is not there. They start to build a big new house.

'Let's make a house of bricks,' says Patrick.

'Oh, yes. Straw and wood aren't very good,' says Peter.

'We don't want this house to fall down!' says Percy.
