READING SECTION

F Read the article about Death Valley. Then choose TRUE or FALSE for each statement.

Death Valley

Death Valley, east of the Sierra Nevada Mountains in California, is a land of extremes. It is the hottest place in North America. In the summer, temperatures often go over 49 degrees Celsius (120 degrees Fahrenheit) during the day and sometimes don't drop below 38 degrees Celsius (100 degrees Fahrenheit) at night.

Death Valley is also the driest place in North America. Average yearly rainfall is less than 51 millimeters (2 inches). There are rivers in Death Valley, but they only flow briefly during the winter – and only in very wet years.

So why is Death Valley so hot and dry? The reason is its geography. Parts of Death Valley are very low. The lowest place in the Western Hemisphere is on the valley floor (86 meters – 282 feet – below sea level). On all sides are high mountains. These mountains keep cool winds and rain out of the valley.

Death Valley is a great distance from California's largest cities, but it is one of the most interesting places in the state to visit. The best time to go to this desert is during the coolest months – from November through March.
