6) Read the following passage and answer the questions that follow:

For decades, scientists have been warning about the negative impact of plastic waste on the environment. While the problem has been recognized for some time, it is only in recent years that it has gained widespread attention. The images of turtles trapped in plastic bags and dolphins choking on plastic straws have captured the public's imagination and have been a wake-up call for many.

But it's not just marine life that is affected by plastic waste. It's estimated that there are now more than 5 trillion pieces of plastic floating in the world's oceans. This plastic not only harms wildlife, but it also poses a threat to human health. Plastic waste in the oceans can break down into microplastics, which can then be ingested by fish and other marine creatures. As a result, these microplastics can end up in our food chain and ultimately in our own bodies.

Fortunately, there are actions we can take to address this problem. Governments around the world are taking steps to reduce plastic waste, from banning single-use plastics to investing in recycling infrastructure. At the individual level, we can reduce our use of plastic, recycle when possible, and support businesses that use sustainable packaging.

a) What has brought attention to the problem of plastic waste in recent years?
