If the answers to these two questions are no, then you should try the digital detox challenge. The idea of the digital detox challenge is to use less technology and to spend less time online. Here are some ideas:

A Use settings

Go to settings and block any emails you don't want to read, so that you get fewer emails. Now turn off notifications so you don't know when you get new emails or messages. Less information is more time away from your phone.

B Make lists

Make a list of all your devices. Of computers, tablets, cell phones that you use at work, school and home. Think about which ones you use the most and think about if you need to use all of them. Ask yourself, ?Do I need them all?? If the answer is no, then maybe you don't need so many devices.

C Download a phone usage app

With this app you can limit the amount of time that you use your phone. You choose the amount of time and then your cell phone won't let you use it any more for that day. This really makes you think about how much you normally use your cell phone.

D Use office hours

You go home after work or after school and you can forget your place of work until 9 a.m. the next day. Do the same with your phone. If you can, turn it off at the end of your working day. Enjoy the quality time with your family.

E Turn off your devices at night

It is important for you to sleep, and people sleep better when there are no cell phones or computers in the bedroom. So, don't listen to music on headphones, or read on your tablet in the bedroom.

1. If you do this, you use your phone for a short time during the day. _____
