- a) A man came to speak with Simon Wheeler. The man was looking for a man named Leonidas W. Smiley. Instead of giving information about Leonidas, Wheeler told a story about a man named Jim Smiley. Jim Smiley was a man who loved betting on anything. One day he made a frog his pet and named it Dan'I Webster. One occasion, Jim bet a stranger that his frog jumped the furthest. Before the competition the stranger made Dan'I drink something so that he lost the competition. After the stranger ran away with $40, Jim figured out that he was cheated. At last the man visiting Wheeler left him to escape from his long story.
- b) A poor woodcutter had two children named Hansel and Gretel. Their mother died when they were young. Soon their father remarried to a cruel stepmother. She left them in the middle of a thick forest. Finally, these two kids found a house in the forest. Unfortunately, they were tricked by a witch who later on caught and tortured them.
- c) Shylock is a wealthy man. When Antonio and Bassanio went to ask him for help, he enjoyed the moment to have Antonio in his hands. However, Antonio had ridiculed and spat on his face once on the street, and Shylock would never forget it. He would help them under a terrible condition. If Antonio could not double the money in three months he would have to pay with a pound of his own flesh. Antonio accepted the treatment because he was convinced that his ships would arrive at the port of Venice with many riches in time. Unfortunately, he was wrong and he wasn't able to repay the loan.
- d) Though Mathilde did not belong to the upper class and was only married to a low-paid clerk she pretended to be one of them. She was in a sulk because she wanted her husband to get two invitations to the Ministry of education party. Her husband somehow got a couple of invitations for them, but Mathilde refused to go for she did not have a dress. At last, her husband reluctantly gave his savings for his wife to buy the dress she wanted. Still, she was not happy with only a new dress. She wanted to wear jewellery to the party. Unfortunately, they could only afford a rose for an accessory but Mathilde, with her pride, didn't want to wear it. The husband despairingly suggested borrowing some jewellery from Madame Jeanne Forestier. Mathilde went to her and borrowed a diamond necklace, which she lost after the party. Mathilde and her husband were shocked to know the price of the original necklace and desperately managed to get 36,000 francs to replace the lost one. After the incident, Mathilde lived pitifully to repay her debt for buying the necklace. Ten years later, she met Madame Forestier who barely recognised her. They talked about what happened to Mathilde and Madame Forestier did not expect that Mathilde would replace her necklace with the original one since hers was only a cheap imitation.
