READING

Read the interview and answer the questions.

Have you ever spent a full day hiking? How about a week? A surprising number of people are choosing to spend months hiking long distances. I spoke to Kristen Lowry, who has just finished hiking the 2200-mile Appalachian Trail (AT), to find out why.

Brian Piper (BP): Hi Kristen, thanks for taking the time to talk to me. I'm sure our readers all want to know why someone would chose to thru-hike (to hike a long-distance trail in one trip) more than 2000 miles (3500 km). But first, can you tell us how you got started hiking.

Kristen Lowry (KL): Of course, Brian. I grew up in the mountains, and when I was a child, I went hiking with my father almost every weekend. You may be surprised, but at first, I thought hiking was so boring!

BP: Really? When did you start to enjoy it?

KL: I remember my first two-day camping trip. My father taught me how to put up a tent, and how to start a fire. We got water from a stream and prepared some food for dinner. I felt so independent, like I could live on my own in nature. That night as I was looking up at the stars, I felt so tired from a long day of hiking but also so relaxed.

BP: So, that trip changed how you felt about hiking?

KL: Well, yes, I think it was that trip. All I know is that being in nature felt good. It even made me feel better when I was upset or disappointed. After that, I started hiking on my own more often.

BP: And is that the reason that you decided to spend five months hiking the Appalachian Trail?

KL: Yes, that's one of the reasons. After years of 2-3 day hikes on different parts of the AT, I became curious about thru-hiking it. To be honest, I just wanted to see if I could do it. I was able to take some time off work, and I thought if not now, then when?

BP: I read that last year almost 4000 people tried to finish hiking the AT, but only 25 percent completed it. Why do you think most people fail?

KL: It's hard! Some people get hurt, others get lonely or bored after a while.

BP: Well, congratulations on making it to the end! Now, what's next for you?

28. What is Kristen talking about in the beginning of the interview?

- a. How she doesn't really enjoy hiking.
- b. How she learned how to cook on a hiking trip.
- c. How she used to go hiking with her father.

- _____ 29. How did Kristen feel about hiking when she first started?

 - b. She thought it was boring.
 - c. She felt very relaxed.
