LUKE HORVAT WRITES ABOUT HIS EARLY CAREER

My dad was a professional basketball player in Germany, as his father had been before him, and I went to watch many of his games when I was a kid. You might think that seeing so many matches would give me a love of the sport, but it actually had the opposite effect. I loved telling my friends how good my dad was, of course, especially when he won a game, but I used to take a book with me to read instead of watching.

Starting secondary school, I was still two years away from being a teenager but was already two metres tall. Seeing my height, my sports teacher asked if I'd be interested in Training with the basketball team. Even though I enjoyed the session, I thought I'd need to develop my skills before I took part in a real match, but the teacher had more confidence in me than I did. It took me a while to agree, but a few weeks later I found myself playing against a team from another school. Mum and Dad coming to watch didn't really help — it made me more nervous. But it was OK in the end!

For the next four years, I practiced every day and did really well, even joining an adult team before I moved abroad to a special sports academy in the USA when I was fifteen. True coach there trains Olympic basketball players, and it was fantastic to work with him. However, I can't say I enjoyed my first experience of living far from my parents. At home, I'd never been able to spend much time with my friends due to all the training, so that wasn't such a change for me. I got used to everything about my new life in the end, though, and my English improved quickly too!

I turned professional at the age of eighteen, three years after arriving in the USA. I'd been taller than most players in the professional league since I was fifteen, but had been much too light for my height, so had to get that right first. My coach already knew a team that would take me while I was still at college, so I joined them and have never regretted it.

ADVENTURES IN THE AIR

The first ever balloon flight carrying passengers was made by the Montgolfier brothers in 1783. They used hot air to float the balloon over 1,000 metres up into the sky. Nowadays, people still fly in hot-air balloons but there is also a less well-known sport called "cluster ballooning": hundreds of one big balloon, hundreds of small balloons are used.

Cluster ballooning was invented by a lorry driver called Larry Walters. Larry had wanted to fly using balloons for a long time (11). It took almost 20 years, however, for his dream to finally come true. One day, Larry decided to do an experiment: he wanted to try flying a few metres above his garden. So he bought 45 balloons, filled them with a gas called helium, and tied them to a chair. He then cut the rope that was holding the chair to the ground. (12) The chair, with Larry sitting in it, floated several kilometres into the sky rather than just a few metres.

The wind was blowing strongly and Larry began to float out towards the sea. Things were getting dangerous. Then, to make matters even worse, the wind changed, and the balloons started to blow towards the local airport. Larry felt very worried. (13) The story of Larry's flight was all over the news and this is how the adventure sport of cluster ballooning was born.

One experienced cluster balloonist, Leo Burns, flew his cluster balloons over the largest range of mountains in Europe - the Alps. This wasn't his first flight, though. Leo had got his pilot's license several years before, so was already used to flying. (14) According to Leo, there is no better way to fly. "Cluster ballooning's amazing," he says. "The balloons are usually completely silent. (15) They weren't as safe as modern cluster balloons either."

- (A) He knew this would still make him feel very afraid
- (B) The old-fashioned hot-air balloons made a horrible noise.
- (C) In fact, he was just a boy when he first started thinking about it.
- (D) Luckily, he landed safely after a couple of hours.
- (E) They are also much less dangerous.
- (F) However, there was an unexpected problem.
- (G) But these days, he prefers to use balloons.
- (H) Immediately after that, he tried to learn how this would be possible.

WHALE SONGS

Did you know that a kind of whale, called a humpback whale, sings? In the 1960s it was

(16) that humpbacks communicate with each other by making beautiful noises. A record was (17) in 1977 called Songs of the humpback whale, which sold millions of copies. People were absolutely amazed to learn that some whales in the deep oceans were so intelligent: in (18) centuries people had thought that whales had simple brains, like fish.

The songs of the whales were so popular that they were (19) in recordings of sounds from our planet which were (20) into space in 1977. The recordings were chosen to show the wide (21) of life on our planet. People hoped that, in the future, they might be found by intelligent creatures far out in space.
