

Mark the statements True or False

1. Habits are behaviors that are performed regularly and cued subconsciously in response to certain environments. True False

2. Habits can only include simple actions like picking your hair when stressed. True False

3. Habits form because at some point your brain learns that the behavior is beneficial. True False

4. Positive experiences can trigger the release of serotonin, a neurotransmitter that mediates feelings of pleasure. True False

5. Your brain builds connections that link the reward with the behavior, driving you to repeat it. True False

6. Once established, cue-behavior-reward loops work slowly, allowing you to notice and stop the habit. True False

7. Habits are stored memories of what's worked in the past, which allow you to take swift action in the present. True False

8. Intentions alone often fail to lead to long-term behavior change. True False

9. One of the most effective ways to manage behavior is to identify locations or times of day that cue the habit. True False

10. Habit reversal training requires you to replace a bad habit with a good one that's less detrimental. True False

 LIVEWORKSHEETS