No — Any - None

no/any + noun

i.   We use no + noun in sentences with a positive verb

ii. we use any + noun in negatives and questions.

- I have no friends.
- I don't have any friends.
- Do you have any friends?

any in affirmative sentences

We can also use any in affirmative sentences when it means 'one or some, but it is not important which'.

- You can come any weekend. (=one weekend; it doesn't matter which)
- Any idiot would know how to use this phone.

none

i.   We use none as a pronoun, i.e., not followed by a noun. We use none to replace countable or uncountable nouns.

- 'How many friends do you have?' 'None.'
- I thought there was some coffee, but there's none.

ii. We can also use none of the car/Tom's/etc. + noun

iii. We can also use none of + us/you/them.

- None of my students is/are from France.
- None of them is/are from France.
- *Note that when None of … is the subject of a sentence, we can use the verb in singular (more formal) or plural form (more informal).

Exercise: Choose any/no/none to complete these sentences.

1. We couldn't find .... open restaurants.

2. Do you have .... pets?

3. There are still .... answers about what happened to her.

4. A: How much milk did you buy?

   B: .... Sorry, I forgot.

5. You can use .... computer in the room. All of them work.

6. ....of the films are available on streaming platforms.

7. We're worried. We've had .... news from them since they left.

8. I didn't ask .... questions.

9. A: How many chapters have you finished?

   B: .... I've had no time.

10. Did you have .... problems?