✦ Interview with teenage mountain climber, Angela Molina:

Last year, 16-year-old Angela Molina climbed Kilimanjaro, which is the highest mountain in Africa.

Who did you go with Angela?

My uncle went climbing several years ago and that gave me the idea, so Dad and I decided to do it together. Mum wanted to come with us but she was busy with work.

How did you prepare for your trip?

I had to get fit. I thought about joining a gym and doing exercise on the machines there. There's a good one in our nearest town. Running along a river and round the fields near home was free so I did that.

Was it very difficult to climb Kilimanjaro?

Yes. We climbed in a group with a guide, and we helped each other. But I started getting headaches – that was the hardest thing. Camping at night was a bit scary and I was often cold, which was difficult too.

How was it at the top?

I couldn't wait to see the views from the top – it was foggy when we were there unfortunately. But just getting there with the others and the fact we did it together was brilliant. And I took some great pictures on the way down.

Will you go climbing again?

I'll certainly climb again in the future. At the end of this term I'd love to spend some time by the sea. But I'll probably just be at home doing things with friends.
