

DIALOGUE

Imagine that you found out that there was a hospital in your hometown that desperately needed donations for children that were hospitalised there. You also found out that some families were really poor and couldn't afford to pay for their own meals while their children were in hospital. So, in some cases, this meant parents couldn't visit their children for weeks. Consequently, you decided to do something to help them.

Complete the dialogue using the prompts below.

Friend: How did you find out about this problem?

Samuel: _____

Friend: And what did you do to help?

Samuel: _____

Friend: What do you mean by that?

Samuel: _____

Friend: I see! What do you think about volunteer work?

Samuel: _____

Friend: I totally agree with you. In my opinion, volunteering should be made mandatory.

Samuel: _____

I read about it in the local newspaper.

Do you really think so? I think that if it was mandatory it wouldn't be volunteering.

Well, we asked students to bring donations to school and we organised a place to collect those donations.

I think it is great, fantastic. We can learn a lot and the sensation of being able to help others is fabulous

I looked for donations of food, clothes and toys.
