THE INTERNATIONAL YOUTH ARTS FESTIVAL

For 10 days every July, hundreds of young people from Britain and around the world come to Kingston upon Thames in south-west London, to act, dance, play or sing at the International Youth Arts Festival. With over 200 things to see and do, it is an important festival of art, music, theatre and dance for young people in the world.

Theatre is usually a part of the festival. Acting groups with young people from five to 26 years old put on plays and shows for children, teenagers and adults. Some of them are famous, like the plays of writers like William Shakespeare, and some of them are very funny.

Music is a big part of the festival. Each year, there are pop, rock and hip hop concerts, with both new and well-known musicians. Do you sing or play an instrument? Why not enter the music competition?

'Workshops' are a very important part of the festival. Workshops are similar to lessons, for students to learn how to sing, dance, rap, write plays, or make clothes, not to learn maths or science. Many young people don't have the possibility to learn about music, theatre and dance because private lessons are very expensive. But workshops are a great way for them to discover the things they like and what they are good at. And perhaps their future is to be singers, dancers or actors at this amazing festival.
