Title: A Remarkable Tuesday in Bogotá

Once upon a time in the bustling city of Bogotá, there lived a student named Ana. Ana had a very interesting day of the week, and that day was Tuesday. You might be thinking, "Who enjoys Tuesdays?" Well, Ana did, and she had her reasons.

Every Tuesday, Ana and her friends would plan to _____ at a different restaurant in the city. It was their special tradition, and they loved trying new dishes and enjoying each other's company. Ana would often _____ the menu with excitement, wondering what delicious meal she would choose that day.

Ana's adventure on Tuesday didn't stop there. After they finished their meal, they would _____ the TransMilenio bus and _____ at the local park, Simón Bolívar Park. There, they played their favorite game of frisbee. Ana would often try to _____ some impressive frisbee tricks from her friends.

As the sun began to set behind the Andes Mountains, Ana and her friends would _____ their cars and drive to the nearby Monserrate hill. There, they could _____ their cars and enjoy a breathtaking view of the city's lights. It was the perfect spot to relax, and Ana would often _____ the photographer in her and capture the beauty of Bogotá at night.

And, of course, when the clock struck midnight, it was time to _____ the day's adventures and head back home. As she got into bed, Ana knew that her Tuesday had been a day filled with exciting moments, delicious food, and the joy of spending time with her friends.

As Ana prepared for bed, she had to _____ her cozy pajamas and _____ her shoes. She also had to _____ the lights and _____ her alarm clock to make sure she would _____ on time for her classes the next day.
