Tornadoes (or 'twisters') are the strongest winds on earth. They can occur in most parts of the world, but are most common in the U.S. in 'Tornado Alley'. The wind speed inside a tornado can be over 500 kilometers an hour. It is difficult to predict when or where tornadoes will happen, but it is possible to survive them. Here is a short guide.

TV weather reports will tell you if there's tornado weather in your area. Unfortunately, we only know a tornado is going to happen when it touches the ground. Most tornadoes happen between 3 p.m. and 7 p.m., so watch the sky at these times.

b. _____

Prepare a tornado shelter in your house. This can be any downstairs room with strong walls and no window. When a tornado comes, hide in this room. A tornado is very loud so you will hear it before it arrives. Don't leave the shelter when the sound stops. Stay there for 30 minutes in case the tornado returns.

c. _____

It is terrifying to be outside in a tornado, but you'll probably survive if you don't panic. Never try to run when the tornado arrives because it can move very fast. Flying objects will hit you if you stand up or run, so stop and lie down. If you are in a car when a tornado hits, you will be safer outside the car. Tornadoes can pick up a car and objects can come through the windows. Tell your parents to stop the car, then get out and lie down.
