The great painter Sir James Thornhill was employed for decorating the interior of the dome of St. Paul's in London. One day he stepped back on the scaffolding to see how the work looked at a distance. His servant, who was standing near, was terrified to see his master within some inches of the edge of the scaffolding. At the last moment backward the painter should be thrown and dashed to pieces on the pavement. How could he be warned of this danger? If the servant cried out, he would probably in his alarm take a fatal step.

So the man was thrown a pot of paint over the piece of work the painter was just admiring. Sir James, in a rage, rushed forward to punish him. Thus, his life was saved. On finding out why the servant had spoiled his painting, Sir James was glad to reward him instead of punishing
