

TOP TIPS

 Keep it specific, personal, and brief.

When you're sharing about yourself in the interview process, try to keep it brief, as well as specific and personal to your own experiences.

 Practice your answer.

One of the most important things you can do is to practice your answer before heading into an interview.

Remember a few talking points that you want to stick to

 Mention abilities and experiences that relate to the position.

Prepare an answer that highlights your relevant abilities, strengths, and areas of expertise

 Three talking points work experience, academic career, and personal life

It's important to talk about successful projects that you worked on, your previous experience, and your plans for your career path.

 Examine how your current job correlates to the job you're applying for.

If you are making a switch to a role with different skills or in a different industry, show how your current skills can relate to the new position.

 Culture Awareness

Being able to communicate effectively with people from different backgrounds and cultures.

This is important in a globalized work environment and can demonstrate your ability to adapt and work well in diverse teams.