I live near a river, and I like to walk along it. There's no traffic and it's lovely. Last year, I began to notice that people dropped their litter on the path, and each day the problem got worse. No one was cleaning it up. It began to upset me. One day, on TV there was an advert from a cleaning company to give your house a "spring clean". I thought, "The river needs a spring clean!" I talked to my friends, and we agreed that we'd have a big "river spring clean" day to clean it up. Then, my friends and I talked to some of the local shops to ask for help and to put up posters in their windows. A local supermarket agreed that they would support our day by organising a small lorry to pick up the litter we had collected. They contacted the local newspaper to come and take photographs. We all had our photos in the local newspaper. It was a lot of fun and such a great success that the local schools offered to organise it, and now the river gets a spring clean every year.
