Reading

Hello Boston!

This is my first trip to Boston, Massachusetts, and so far it's been an unforgettable experience. We're here for ten days, and then we'll be going to New York for another five days before going home. There are lots of things to see and do here – we've already been on the old town trolley* tour, which was a great way to see the sights of the city. This afternoon we're going to visit Quincy Market to do some shopping and then have dinner there. Tomorrow, we've got tickets to go on the harbour cruise. I had promised my sister that we'd do the pizza tour of the North End of the city tomorrow afternoon, but I'm not sure if we'll have time now. My dad wants to go to a baseball match at Fenway Park and do a tour of the place, too. I'm going to do that with him, and Mum and my sister are going to do a walking tour of the old part of the city. The tour takes two hours and they'll have the opportunity to learn lots about the history of the city.

We're all looking forward to going to the beach at Martha's Vineyard later this week. We take a bus to Cape Cod and then take the ferry from there. Then at the weekend, we're doing a photographic tour of Boston – it's a tour where you are taught how to take good photos. My mum has an amazing new camera and lens, so that will be a good opportunity for her.

Then, just before we go to New York, we're going to do a very different type of tour – it's a chocolate tasting experience! I hear you're taken to six different places to try out different types of chocolate made in the city. I can't wait!

*trolley – a type of transport similar to a tram
