Exception #1

Some adverbs are irregular because they don't have an -ly ending. These adverbs and adjectives have the same form. Common irregular adverbs include hard, fast, and late.

• She is a fast runner.
(the adjective fast describes the noun runner)
• She runs fast.
(the adverb fast describes the verb runs)

Exception #2

Another irregular adverb is well.
The adjective good becomes the adverb well.

• There are many good athletes at our school.
(the adjective good describes the noun athletes)
• Our school's athletes performed well during the competition.
(the adverb well describes the verb performed)

Exception #3

Some adjectives end in -ly just like most adverbs do. Common adjectives ending in -ly are friendly, costly, and silly. Other words, such as hourly, daily, weekly, monthly, and yearly, can be both adjectives and adverbs.

• They have a daily meeting.
(the adjective daily describes the noun meeting)
• They attend a meeting daily.
(the adverb daily describes the verb attend)
