3) What you think about it

1) I recently returned from studying in the United States for several months. I'd like to share my sexperience studying abroad with you. 2) I took an English language course for the first two months. Although the course was short, my English improved a lot. That was because I always spoke English during that time. After the course, I participated in an exchange program at a secondary school. I studied the same subjects as the other students at this school. I tried my best. However, I still needed to improve my English in order to understand all of the lessons. Luckily, my new friends there helped me with my projects and homework. 3) I had a wonderful time there and gained a lot of experience.

ABOUT ME

Hi all!
My name's Thanh.

This is my second week in the US, and I'm experiencing a lot of things that I don't think are available back home. First, in Vietnam, I usually have a big breakfast with some kinds of noodles, such as phở or bún bò Huế. In the US, however, I eat pancakes or muffins for breakfast. I sometimes eat fruit and drink tea or coffee in the morning. Second, everything appears to be bigger here than in Vietnam, from food portions to shoe sizes. An American burger, for example, is about twice the size of a Vietnamese burger. Besides, a size 45 sneaker is typical in America, while it is rare in Vietnam. There are still many other interesting things about this big country. Let me tell you about them in my next post.

Thank you for reading my post.

I am very interested in your post. Everything is also different in Spain. Last summer, I spent my vacation in Spain. In Spain, a small portion of beefsteak was the same size as a large portion in Vietnam. When people greeted each other, I found it strange that they kissed each other on the cheeks.

I didn't have a chance to visit the US. However, I joined a one-year exchange program in Thailand. I also experienced so many things. Studying abroad is interesting, isn't it?
