When I came back to the flat I was sharing with Mark, a college friend, it was already past midnight. I had spent the weekend in my hometown with my parents and I was feeling quite relaxed. I quietly unlocked the door and went into the flat. (1)___ I nearly fell over Mark's sports bag, which he'd carelessly left in the middle of the hall. His shoes and tennis stuff were lying all around the floor. I took off my coat and went to the kitchen to have some tea. It was the same old story there. (2)___ Food leftovers were on the table and the bin was so full that some rubbish had fallen over it onto the floor. Angry, I dashed to the living room, which I'd carefully tidied on Friday before leaving the place. The awful smell of cigarette smoke hit my nose as soon as I opened the door. I'd asked him a thousand times not to smoke in the flat. The living room wasn't any better than the kitchen. (3)___ He hadn't even emptied the ashtray, which was full of cigarette ends and gave off a terrible smell. 'I've had enough of that!' I thought as I walked angrily into his bedroom.

- A There was a pile of dirty dishes in the sink.
- B I was sure he was already asleep.
- C And my good mood disappeared a second later.
- D I always did the tidying when it was my turn.
- E The coffee table was cluttered with his CDs and books.
