

FACING THE Challenge

Have you ever had / Did you ever have / Will you ever have _____ in life? Well, I certainly have / do / did. There were moments _____ I wished I would / could / can go back _____ time and _____ different choices. However, _____ Frank Sinatra says / sayed / said, "regrets, I've had a _____, but then again, too few to mention".

Recently, I have decided / decided / decide to take _____ a new project at work. I must / might / could admit, I might have bite / have bitten / bit _____ I can / could / would _____. At _____, I had found / found / find it all _____: the new technologies, new team, new clients, and so on. Little did / do / does I know, it would is / are / be a rollercoaster _____.

As I faced / face / faces the challenges, I have to / has to / had to remind _____ that I has promised / had promised / have promised my leader I could / will / would _____ the project _____. It was not easy, and I feels / felt / feel like I was facing / was faced / have faced _____ at times. The most difficult thing was to deal / deal /dealing _____ the client, who was a non-technical person but still make / made / makes me _____ for every little decision I _____ about my code.

_____ the end, I have decided / decided / decide to _____ and _____ my worries. It is / were / was a tough journey, and the record _____, but I learn / learnt / learned a lot. Sometimes, even when it feels like all was / has / is for _____, there's a valuable lesson _____ every experience. So, my advice was / is / were _____ embrace the challenges, learn _____ them, and keep moving / moves / moved forward. After _____, it's the journey that truly matters.