 LIVEWORKSHEETS

In Ecuador, there are five branches of government, which are:

Executive branch:

Responsible for executing the laws and administering the government. The head of the executive branch is the President of the Republic.

Legislative branch:

Responsible for making the laws. The legislative branch is formed by the National Assembly.

Judicial branch:

Responsible for interpreting the laws and resolving legal conflicts. The judicial branch is formed by the National Court of Justice.

Electoral branch:

Responsible for organizing and carrying out electoral processes. The electoral branch is formed by the National Electoral Council.

Transparency and social control branch:
Responsible for promoting transparency and social control of the government. The transparency and social control branch is formed by the Council for Citizen Participation and Social Control.
