- 2 Read the text. Which activities from exercise 1 has Matt Cutts done?

The 30-day Challenge

Have you ever wanted to try something new? Perhaps you've wanted to take up a new hobby or learn a new skill. What stopped you? Not enough time? The fear of failure? Was it difficult to change your routine?

Matt Cutts is an American software engineer. A few years ago, he was bored with his life. That's when he decided to try the 30-day challenge. The idea is simple. You think of something you haven't done before, but you've always wanted to do, and you try it for 30 days. He started with small challenges, such as walking more, riding his bike to work, and giving up sugar for a month. Gradually, his challenges became bigger and more difficult. Now, Matt has written a novel, he's taught himself to play the ukulele, and he's even climbed Mount Kilimanjaro!

Trying something new can be kind of terrifying, but doing it for just 30 days doesn't seem so hard. At the end of the month, you can stop ... or who knows? You might decide to go on with your new activity. For example, Matt gave up TV and did other things like reading books, instead. After 30 days, the first thing he did was turn on the TV. However, he found that he watched less TV than before because he enjoyed doing the other things, too.

Matt says that the challenges have made his life much more interesting. He's also become more confident. So, what about you? Is there something you've always wanted to do? What are you waiting for? Try it for 30 days!
