

Write it's, there's or there are.

On a dark night, a group of friends explored an abandoned mansion.

_____ an scary feeling as they approached the creaky gates.

As they entered, _____ a mysterious atmosphere. Broken windows and dusty furniture hinted at the passage of time. _____ an old piano in the corner, untouched for years, yet still emitting an otherworldly vibe.

In one room, _____ a flickering candle casting shadows.

_____ a feeling of unease as they approached, but curiosity got the better of them. _____ an old journal on the table, filled with cryptic writings.

Suddenly, _____ a loud bang, and the friends gasped.

_____ a draft from a broken window? _____ no logical explanation for the noise.

As they ventured deeper, _____ a sense of foreboding.

_____ something unsettling about the place, yet

_____ a strange allure that kept them exploring.

Finally, as they exited, _____ a sense of relief. _____

an adventure they would never forget, and _____ a story to tell for years to come.

Write a, an, the or nothing (-).

Once upon _____ time, in _____ small village near _____ majestic mountain, lived Robert, _____ kind-hearted blacksmith. One day, he found _____ unusual stone in _____ nearby forest. _____ stone had mysterious symbols.

Excited, Robert took _____ stone to _____ wise elder in _____ village, who declared it was _____ magical artifact. Soon, villagers gathered in _____ village square to witness _____ magic.

Robert, with _____ humble heart, held _____ stone high. "This is _____ symbol of unity," he declared. "Let us embrace _____ spirit of cooperation and create _____ better future together."

In _____ days that followed, _____ village flourished. _____ fields yielded abundant crops, and _____ people lived in harmony. _____ magical stone became _____ symbol of hope and inspiration.

And so, in _____ small village, _____ magic of _____ simple stone taught _____ valuable lesson about community and _____ power of belief.

Write a question about the underlined part.

- 1) The children played in the park.

- 2) Dad took the money to the bank.

- 3) Sarah has three sons.

- 4) His daughter was born in August.
