Lunar New Year

Lunar New Year, often known as “Tet” in Vietnam, is a big and joyful celebration in many Asian cultures, including Vietnam. It's all about fresh starts and family reunion. People get ready by cleaning their houses and decorating them with colorful flowers, red and gold decorations that bring good luck, and prosperity. Families come together to enjoy customary dishes like spring rolls or banh chung. One fun tradition during this time is giving red envelopes, called "lucky money," to kids and unmarried people. These envelopes carry good wishes for the coming year.

Lunar New Year is also known for its lively parades and cultural performances. The streets are filled with colorful dragon and lion dances, and there are fireworks at night, making it a spectacular show. It's a time for communities to celebrate their culture and express their hopes for a successful and fortunate year ahead.
