Contact lenses are being used to replace conventional glasses because sometimes glasses are inconvenient. For instance, in sports, instead of using obnoxious sports goggles, many athletes wear contact lenses for safety reasons. People can also use contact lenses if they want to change the color of their eyes. You can wear contact lenses, for example, to have red eyes with a vampire costume.

It is believed that Leonardo da Vinci first thought of the idea of wearing contact lenses for better vision in the 1500s. He made sketches but there is no evidence that his design was ever realized. Throughout the 1800s many scientists played with the idea of contact lenses but no one perfected the use of them. The first models couldn't be worn for long periods of time because of their discomfort. As they were inflexible and did not let oxygen get to the eyes, in some cases they caused more problems than they fixed. The earlier versions were also very fragile and expensive, which made them not usable for many people.

It wasn't until the late 1900s that contact lenses started to be effective and affordable enough for everyone to use. They became more and more popular as people became aware that there was an alternative to wearing glasses. Nowadays, more advanced contact lenses have been developed. They can not only fix poor vision but also improve good vision. Although contact lenses have become very popular over the last few decades, laser technology now allows people to improve their eyesight through a relatively quick, inexpensive, and painless procedure. This technology may soon phase out contact lenses.
