PASSAGE 2

Joy and her mother lived in an apartment in Freeport. Joy had no brothers or sisters, and there were no children living nearby. Her best friend was a very old woman named Mary, who lived down the hall. Mary's most prized possessions were a cat named Tom and an album of photographs from her family in Andros.

When she visited Mary, Joy liked to look through the album. Most of the photos were of Mary's family members and pictures of Blue Holes, churches and beaches. Mary would talk about these long-dead relatives but would end by telling stories about the Iguanas and crabs that lived in the mangroves near her family home. Joy loved listening to these stories. She wanted to become a scientist to assist in saving the mangroves from destruction.

One night as Joy was doing her homework she heard sirens and saw fire trucks on the street below. The next thing she knew, a firefighter was pounding on their door. The top floors of the building were on fire. Joy's mother shouted "Grab your stereo and let's go!" Joy had saved her money for a year to buy the stereo.

"Mary may need help". Joy yelled as she raced down the hall to her friend's apartment. The door was standing open. The firefighters had already helped Mary and Tom downstairs; smoke was filling the hallways.

Joy's mother was anxiously waiting for her on the street. She saw that her daughter had saved only Mary's photo album. "I'm sorry about your stereo", Joy's mother said.

"That's all right," Joy said, "I made the right choice."

'UNDERWATER THRILLS'

Our islands are known as one of the best diving countries in the world. Tourists flock here each year to view an array of marine life. They enjoy exploring ship wrecks, cruising coral reefs or joining a school of reef sharks for dinner. It's not just sharks that attract divers to our waters. Scattered about the islands are blue holes. These are places where the ocean floor drops hundreds of feet. The Bahamas is also home to the third largest barrier reef in the world. It is found on the east coast of Andros. The variety of marine life found there is amazing and includes turtles, sting rays, crawfish and reef fish.
