YOUR REPLIES

I've been amazed how quickly I've improved! It's really satisfying. I've been in my own band a year now, and we've even won a few competitions! I've made loads of friends that way, too. Everyone you meet likes music, so you've already got lots to talk about. – Kitty, Hull

Well, why not? Bad weather makes us sad, but this is a way to feel happy again. Yes, you do need to feel confident to try this! Some people have laughed at me, it's true – but many more have joined in! – Ben, Penrith

I can't believe there are people out there who've never seen the sun come up! You don't need to be a poet or an artist to find that beautiful. Oh, and this is an extra idea, but go swimming with dolphins! I did it last summer and now I can't stop telling everyone how amazing it was. – Lucy, Aberdeen

Yesterday I helped to look for a man's dog. The day before that, I stood up when an old lady got on the bus, and I gave her my seat. These people weren't friends or family. They were simply people who needed help. And helping them made me feel great. Try it! It's quite surprising. – Prash, Nottingham

I've tried red, gothic black – and blue! I did it in the school holidays, so teachers didn't complain. (Warning: check that your parents are cool with this first! You don't want them to go crazy.) Or experiment with different clothes instead. It's great fun. There's lots of time to look 'serious' when you're an adult! – Faith, Preston
