Weather Vocabulary

When we want to know about weather in the future, we usually ask one of these questions:

What's the forecast for tomorrow / the weekend?

What's the weather going to be like this afternoon / when you're there?

To talk about predictions we're sure of, we use will or be going to. To show we're less certain, we use it'll probably or it may / might.

They said ~~it's raining~~ it'll probably rain this afternoon but it might clear up by this evening.

Match the two parts of the sentences.

1 They said it'll be hot and humid during the day, and so
2 They said it's going to be really windy, so
3 Apparently, it's going to be really sunny, so 4 They said it'll be freezing and 5 They said it's going to be boiling hot all week and 6 Apparently, it's going to pour down tomorrow, so 7 They said it'll be generally quite warm during the day, but 8 The same as today: grey and miserable, but a it might drop to minus 10°.

b on Tuesday it might reach 36°. I hate the heat!
c there might possibly be a storm this evening.
d we should take down the parasol or it'll blow away.
e I'll probably stay at home and keep out of the rain!
f I might even get a suntan!
g they said it might clear up next week!
h it might get a bit chilly at night.
