

shaven, wrinkles, patient, polite, bald (2), occupation

It's hard to say what a typical human being looks like. We come in all shapes and sizes, from the very tall to the very short, from the very thin to the very fat. Some of us have long hair, others are _____(1). Some of us have lots of _____(2), others have hardly any. But there is one thing that most people agree on: we can usually tell if a person is male or female just by looking at them.

In many cultures, men are often taller than women, and they tend to have shorter hair. They also usually have more body hair - for example, on their faces and chests. In some cultures, men have beards, while in others, they keep their faces clean- _____(3). Women, on the other hand, often have longer hair (although this is not always the case), and they usually have less body hair than men. In many countries, it is common for women to remove the hair from their legs and under their arms.

In addition to our physical appearance, there are many other factors that define who we are. These include our personality, our nationality, and our _____(4). For example, if you meet someone who is very _____(5) and _____(6), you might think they are a doctor or a nurse. If they are wearing a suit, you might guess that they work in an office. If they are carrying a musical instrument, you might assume that they are a musician. And if they have a foreign accent, you might ask where they come from.

In conclusion, there is no one way to describe a typical human being. We come in all shapes and sizes, from the very tall to the very short, from the very thin to the very fat. Some of us have long hair, others are _____(7). Some of us have lots of wrinkles, others have hardly any. But there is one thing that most people agree on: we can usually tell if a person is male or female just by looking at them.