Curing the sick

“When he got home, he learned that a young man who lodged with him had just died, and that he had been assisted to the end by Vincent, at the very moment when he had seen him as it were, unconscious in the confessional. (Page 116)

1.

"I was serving his Mass, when in my amazement, at the moment of the elevation of the Host, I saw him lifted several feet above the ground;" (Page 115)

2.

"My daughter Camilla was dangerously ill, and for three days and nights had taken no food. One day, when I was away, a priest came into my shop and said to my wife: "Give thanks to God, your daughter is cured." My wife answered: "Alas, no Father! So far from being cured, she is almost in her last agony." But the priest whom she did not know repeated: "Have confidence in God. Your daughter is cured. Very much surprised, my wife asked the priest his name, Vincent Pallotti he replied and then left the shop. My wife ran upstairs to our daughter and found her, as Father Vincent had said, completely cured, (Page 111-112)

3.

"In one special instance when a very urgent message had been sent, Vincent did not stir to the great surprise of a priest who was with him at the time, A lay brother of his congregation went to inquire into the circumstances of the case. When the brother went upstairs to the room of the supposed sick man, he was set upon by three or four men with sticks thinking they had Vincent to their hands." (Page 110-111)

4.

"A fact of the same kind happened to another young man who persisted to going to a certain monastery contrary to Vincent's advice. The religious received him kindly but the very night of his arrival he fled from the house." (Page 108)
