VII. Read the passage and choose the correct answers.

Reuse and recycle are often confused and used interchangeably. However, they are two entirely different processes. If you utilize a product in its original form for the same function, you are reusing. If you disassemble a product then use its component for a new purpose, you are recycling. According to many researches and environmentalists, reusing is the preferable process out of the two because it's better for the environment. Recycling still has a positive impact as it helps saving Earth's resources from getting wasted. However, the process of destroying a product then producing another one still requires energy and releases pollutants into the environment. So next time you have an unused product, think 'green', consider reusing before recycling.
