Questions 6–10

For each question, choose the correct answer.

The people below all want to choose a place to have a party.
On the opposite page there are eight descriptions of places to have a party.
Decide which place would be the most suitable for the people below.

6

Jane is planning a very small party for her friends, and wants it to be in a historic place. She would like a photographer to be provided.

7

Colin and Alison want to hire a whole building just for themselves and their guests. They'd like the place to have a professional party organiser to help them plan everything, including an excellent meal.

8

Alex and Diana would like to arrive at their party by boat, and they want somewhere without bright lights. They're looking for a place which has had good reviews.

9

Peter needs a place where elderly guests can move around without difficulty, which also offers accommodation. He wants the choice of having the party either indoors or outdoors, depending on the weather on the day.

10

Jenny and Robin want a place where they can bring food themselves, and where children can run around and have fun. Some of their guests will need help with transport to the party.

Places to hold a party

A Hotel Homewood
Homewood is all on the ground floor, including guest bedrooms and all party facilities, to allow access for everyone. The beautiful hall will be available to you for your party, as well as the lovely gardens – watch boats go past on the river as you enjoy your celebration.

B Murphy's
Murphy's will provide a party expert to help you arrange your event. You won't need to share the venue with anyone, as the place will be all yours for the day. Our experienced staff will serve top-quality dishes and help keep young children entertained.

C Bruton Hall
At Bruton Hall, you can choose from a range of options, depending on your budget. For example, you can hire one of our chefs for the day or do the cooking yourselves. Our party guests get discounts on accommodation at several local hotels, all of which have had really good reviews.

D Waterford Hotel
Whether you want to let our chefs amaze you, or to provide your own refreshments, a party in this magnificent old building is an event to remember. Our staff can organise a taxi for anyone who requires one. We also have a fantastic playground for younger guests.

E Kite Lodge
It's possible to sail to the front door of Kite Lodge in the historic harbour. Kite Lodge was built in 1537 and the party room is lit only by candles, which is perfect for amazing photos of your event. Look online to see all the positive comments about previous events held here.

F The Priory Hotel
We have a team of staff to help with your celebration or event, including a prize-winning party planner, top chefs and our own photographer. We work hard to ensure that all guests, including kids and older visitors, have a fabulous time. There are 63 double bedrooms, all with easy access. So why not come and talk to us?

G Freshford Farm
Set in gorgeous countryside, it can be hard to believe that the airport is just a 10-minute drive away. Freshford Farm now has a specially built party hall, with glass walls allowing light in, so photos taken inside look as though they were taken outside! And children will love seeing the farm animals on site.

H Savernake House
The magnificent Savernake House dates back to the 18th century, and will look amazing in your party photos. We can even arrange for someone to take those for you, and capture the fantastic atmosphere! Unlike many places, we don't have a minimum number of guests.

Questions 11–15

For each question, choose the correct answer.

Being a volunteer in Thailand

My name's Ella, and I'm 22. Last year I went to Thailand for two weeks with my sister Josie. Despite her being five years younger than me, our relationship isn't too bad. We went to help as part of a group of volunteers at an elephant sanctuary – a place where people look after sick and rescued elephants. To be honest, I wasn't sure at first if we would have much in common with the rest of the group because they were all much older than us. We were also nervous because it was the first time we'd done anything like that. In the end, though, there was no need to worry.

One of our main jobs at the sanctuary was to collect the elephants' food. Elephants eat huge amounts of grass and banana plants, so collecting this took most of the day. Josie found it really hard work, but to see the elephants enjoying their meal meant that, for me, it was worth it. We also helped wash the elephants in the river using big brushes and soap. I found that so much fun, even if I got wetter than the elephants did! The part of the day I most looked forward to was the evening. By the light of the moon, we led the elephants on foot into the forest area where they spent the night.

All the volunteers stayed in the same house. Josie and I shared a bedroom, so we didn't have much space. That was our decision, though, as Josie didn't want to be on her own. It was hot and humid, especially at night, but we'd expected that. The meals were delicious – and didn't include meat or fish, which neither of us is keen on. After dinner, all the volunteers and staff spent the evenings talking and playing games.

Now that we're back in the UK, Josie doesn't often talk about Thailand. But if anyone asks her if she enjoyed her time at the sanctuary, she says she loved it. However, I'm not sure she's being completely honest. I think she's probably a bit annoyed with herself now that she didn't take full advantage of her time there because she was missing her friends too much. But when she looks back, she can see how lucky she was to go there. Maybe she'll go back one day – I certainly will!

Five sentences have been removed from the text below.
For each question, choose the correct answer.
There are three extra sentences which you do not need to use.

The clever design of supermarkets

Most people don't realise how cleverly designed many big supermarkets around the world are. This careful planning includes where each of the products is located, the lights, the music, everything!

The first thing people in many countries may notice as they walk into large supermarkets is that getting into the store is much easier than getting out. 16 _____ This means that customers end up having to walk through half of the store to find a way out, seeing more things they want to buy on the way.

Once they're inside, the first products many shoppers often see are fruit and vegetables. 17 _____ If that were the case, fruit and vegetables, many of which are easily damaged, could be put on top of the other shopping. But having them near the entrance can make customers feel that everything in the store is fresh and healthy, encouraging them to buy more.

What customers might also notice as they enter is the smell of freshly baked bread. This attracts many people towards the bakery to buy some. 18 _____ Putting it in this location makes sure that shoppers walk past as many other products as possible to reach their delicious bread.

Research shows that if music is played in supermarkets, customers slow down and spend more time shopping. 19 _____ And supermarkets know, of course, that this also means they'll buy more products.

In some countries, when customers finally arrive at the queue for the checkouts, they find themselves face-to-face with shelves full of small, inexpensive products like chocolate and sweets. 20 _____ So they're often bought by tired parents to keep their bored sons or daughters entertained as they pack their shopping. Products placed next to checkouts sell up to eight times faster than in other parts of a store.

LIVEWORKSHEETS

A	In one study, they actually stayed 34% longer than if there was none.
B	As a result, shoppers pass the cheaper products more quickly.
C	That's why expensive products are placed at the same height as people's eyes.
D	In fact, it would be more convenient for customers to reach this section later.
E	Many of these are designed to attract children.
F	That's because they often have entry doors that can't be used as exits.
G	This would encourage customers and their children to leave the store too quickly.
H	However, it's often right at the back of the store.
