The Importance of Parental Support During Exam Season

Dear Mom and Dad,

In just 28 days, we will be taking our district exams, which are crucial for our advancement to the next level of our education. As you both know, I am carrying a heavy burden, and I understand your desire for me to succeed. I too hope to achieve excellent results.

Dad, I know that you work tirelessly, often on night shifts, and have a busy schedule between work and home. Mom, since you started at your new job, you've been extremely busy, leaving early and coming home late, spending hours on the phone with colleagues discussing work or staying overtime to finish projects. You both know that our communication has decreased significantly, and aside from asking about my grades, all you do is urge me to finish my homework and sign off on it without much discussion.

Mom and Dad, during this critical period, I need your support and encouragement. I hope that amidst your busy schedules, you can find time to spend with me, provide guidance and assistance with my studies. Even though I am growing up and becoming more independent, I still need your comfort when I encounter setbacks, your guidance when I am confused, and your praise when I achieve great results.

Please rest assured that I will work hard and face the district exams with a positive and calm attitude.

Love,
