El Paraíso: School Garden

"El Paraíso" is a school garden located within a public school in southwest Bogotá.

Under the guidance of teachers, students cultivate a variety of organic products including tomatoes, potatoes, spinach, celery, and herbs.

They also compost leftovers from their snacks, transforming organic waste into valuable fertilizer that enriches the soil and promotes the healthy growth of their crops.

The food they grow is used to prepare meals for the school community, featuring dishes such as Colombian soups, spinach cake, carrot cake, among others.

Through "El Paraíso," students gain practical knowledge about sustainable agriculture and the importance of healthy eating habits.
