Write Paragraphs Showing Comparison and Contrast

Two drums which are important in bands or orchestras are the snare drum and the bass drum. Both drums are made of wood and calfskin. They are played with two sticks. However, some of their differences lie in their shapes and kinds of sticks used to beat them. The snare drum has a cylindrical shape and is made of wood or brass covered at each end with tightly stretched calfskin. The side on which the player beats is called the "batter head" and the lower side the "snare head". The sticks used with the snare drum are rather thin with small wooden heads. The bass drum on the other hand, is made of a wooden shell covered with calfskin which can be tightened by metal rods. The sticks used to play the bass drum are heavy with large heads made of felt or lamb's wool.
