

Read the following paragraph and be ready to answer questions at the end.

Hi there, my name is Wendy, I'm 34 years old, and I work as a speaker. Today, I will share my story. I get up at 6:00 a.m. every weekday; I usually get up at 8.00 am on the weekends. I have eaten cereal every single day for the past 10 years! Likewise, I know. It's a part of my life now. I like to walk two or three times a week when I'm not busy. Living here in Los Angeles reminds me of my natal country because sometimes it's rainy and dry, which means I can enjoy doing activities with my friends and take advantage of it. Now it's time to talk about an interesting and important aspect of our lives'; health is our life, to say the least. I always recommend visiting a doctor when you feel like there is something wrong with your body. And I tell people to do so as a result of an experience that I had five years ago. Basically, what happened was that I hardly ever went to the hospital. I think that the last time I went was when my mom had me. I had the flu and a simple cough. At this point, everything was normal. I took lots of pills and medicine without a doctor's prescription, but as the days went by, I started to feel bad, or worse. Long story short, one day I couldn't breathe, talk, or walk because of how fragile my body was. I was hospitalized for a month. To this day, I don't take my health for granted; now I eat healthy food, do exercises, and drink water, and this allows me to enjoy my life.

Answer the following questions.

1. Wendy is a speaker who  gets up at 8:00 on the
2. Wendy had problems with her health  ago.
3. How often Wendy tells people to go to see a doctor when they feel bad.
4. How long was Wendy's hospital stay?