Ian saw a photo of scuba diving in the Bahamas on a Facebook page. Instead of just clicking Like on the Facebook page, he decided to save up, buy a ticket and go there himself. He called his best friend and a few months later they were flying out to the Out Islands. "It was a perfect place to learn scuba diving. The water was warm, amazingly clear and full of coral and multicolored fish. There's a whole other world down there. It's unbelievable. It's not just what you see but also the silence."

Ian and his friend even dared to go on a shark dive, something their friends back home couldn't believe. "Ian was frightened of large animals as a child, so when he told us he went on a shark dive we didn't believe him, but he showed us the video footage. Right enough there he was, kneeling on the seabed with a circle of sharks above him," says another close friend back home.

B Gemma was teaching English in a small village in Andalucia, Spain and her friend Rose went to visit her for ten days. When Rose arrived they met up in Seville.

"It was beautiful, like something out of an Alice in Wonderland dream. We arrived during a festival and there were roses and Flamenco dresses everywhere."

Before the trip Rose had taken some Spanish lessons.

"I spent two months going to evening classes twice a week. When I arrived in Spain I didn't use my Spanish as much as I thought I would because Gemma did most of the talking in Spanish, as she is almost fluent. It was only as I was about to return home that I started speaking Spanish more. My last night there we sat in a beautiful plaza in Seville with fountains, orange trees, the classic Sevillian white buildings and of course some delicious seafood tapas, and we got talking to some locals. I finally got a chance to use some of the Spanish I had learned!"

Adele and Jenny met each other at their workplace in London and discovered that they had both always wanted to go to Paris. They had a long weekend off work and decided to travel together. When they arrived, they took the Paris Métro to the Latin Quarter, stopped for a coffee and chocolate croissant and asked for a recommendation for where to stay. "We didn't plan where we would stay before we left. We just booked two Eurostar train tickets to get us there. It turned into a food and art trip.

We walked around the city and everywhere we found amazing galleries. We visited the Louvre to see the Mona Lisa, the Venus de Milo and the Egyptian artefacts. It's such a huge museum, it's impossible to see everything in just one day, so we had certain artworks in mind that we wanted to see. My favorite gallery, though, was the Musée Rodin." Adele and Jenny enjoyed themselves enormously in Paris and agreed to meet up again for another long weekend somewhere else.

LIVEWORKSHEETS

Cueva del Indio, a cave in Viñales, Cuba, is full of impressive stalactites (long rock pieces hanging down from the roof of a cave) and stalagmites (long pieces of rock sticking up from a cave floor). Hans and Don traveled in a small canoe inside the Cueva del Indio. "The guide told us some scary stories as we made our way along the underground streams. There were some awesome stalactites and stalagmites and their strange shadows on the cave wall added spooky effects to the stories. In the town of Viñales the people were very friendly. We passed by some locals sitting on their porch and we stopped to ask them for directions to a botanical garden. Turns out that they had met a friend of ours back home. They said, "Any friend of Mark is our friend, too. We're not doing anything today. We'll take you there," and they came with us.
