Some adults believe that as teenagers spend so (1) time on-line, they are likely to do their shopping that way. In fact, that's not true, at (2) not for me. Once in a (3) , I buy some things online, (4) as a phone case or a backpack, and I get computer games that way (5) well. It's very convenient because I can find something unique and order exactly (6) I want. These (7) , Amazon is № 1 retail website but (8) are many other online retailers offering nice things. However, I never buy T-shirts and stuff (9) that online, as you can't try anything on before you buy. Sometimes things look different in real life. A blue jumper may turn out to be grey! I prefer to buy a reduced price article than one at full price that's (10) I don't mind waiting for items to go on sale before making a purchase.

Aromatherapy is the practice of using aromatic substances, (1) are called essential oils, to heal the body, mind and spirit. These oils come (2) flowers, leaves or other parts of plants and can improve (3) physical and emotional wellbeing (4) long as you use them in a safe way. Just a whiff of their fragrance may promote relaxation and relieve stress and anxiety. Essential oils have also (5) used to treat skin problems, depression, insomnia as (6) as high blood pressure.

As aromatic plants (7) used by the most ancient civilizations, we could say that aromatherapy is at (8) 6000 years old. But so far (9) is limited scientific evidence to support claims that aromatherapy effectively prevents or cures illnesses. (10) it does is help the body to find a natural way to do so.

(1) is often assumed that a look at our origins will lead us (2) the meaning of life. Perhaps, instead (3) answering the question of (4) we are here by looking backwards, we should look forwards. What future goal would make this life worth living? The problem with working towards goals was identified more (5) two millennia ago (6) the philosopher of common sense, Aristotle. His point was that we do many things for the sake of something (7) We eat to live, work to pay the bills, study to pass exams, and so (8) But if nothing is done for its own sake, is (9) any point in doing anything? There must be things (10) are valuable in themselves: friends, love, success, happiness, raising children, helping others and what not. These are the things that really count and make our life worthwhile.
