2A Comparative adjectives

We use a comparative adjective + than to compare two things or people.

The park is nicer than the bus station.

Los Angeles is bigger than San Francisco.

The lasagna here is better than the chicken.

2.2

comparative adj + than

Adam is	older than	me.
Julie is	friendlier than	Laura.
Skiing is	more dangerous than	walking.

Spelling rules for comparative adjectives

When an adjective is one syllable, we add -er.

fast \Rightarrow faster old \Rightarrow older

When a one-syllable adjective ends in -e, we add -r.

nice \Rightarrow nicer safe \Rightarrow safer

When a one-syllable adjective ends in a consonant + vowel + consonant, we double the final consonant and add -er.

hot \Rightarrow hotter big \Rightarrow bigger

When an adjective ends in consonant + y, we usually change the y to i and then we add -er.

easy \Rightarrow easier friendly \Rightarrow friendlier happy \Rightarrow happier

BUT shy \Rightarrow shyer dry \Rightarrow dryer

When an adjective is two or more syllables, we usually use more + adjective.

dangerous \Rightarrow more dangerous crowded \Rightarrow more crowded modern \Rightarrow more modern

Some comparatives are irregular.

good \Rightarrow better bad \Rightarrow worse far \Rightarrow further/farther

Look! With some two-syllable adjectives, we usually use -er, not more.

quiet \Rightarrow quieter narrow \Rightarrow narrower

We can also use less + adjective + than to compare things.

I'm less stressed on the weekend than during the week. = I'm more relaxed on the weekend than during the week.

We can add much and a lot before comparatives to show there is a big difference.
We can add a little or a bit before comparatives to show the difference is small.

much, a lot, a little, a bit

big difference:

New York is much bigger than Boston.
Skiing is a lot more dangerous than walking.

small difference:

Today is a little hotter than yesterday.
The café is a bit more crowded than the restaurant.
