

Fill in missing prepositions.

1. Are you ready order, sir?
2. I would like to moveof this terrible flat as soon as possible.
3. Where is the competition takingthis year?
4. The thief broke our house and took some valuable things.
5. He was dressed*as a police officer for the Halloween Party.
6. Instead sleeping, you could do something useful.
7. What are you thinking?
8. I need to lookmy documents and searchthis agreement.
9. You need to turn your mobile phones during the exam.
10. I need to talkout bossmy pay rise.
11. She's looking her wallet. Have you seen it?
12. I'm fed upstudying - I need a vacation.
13. Could you explain she found my hidden notebook?
14. Tom Cruise is starring a new movie.
15. You'd better register the course pretty soon before it fills up.
16. Don't let him takeyour freedom to think for yourself
17. He is charge the municipal housing projects.
18. I need some time my own.
19. I have a lot of work to do, but I will try to comethis weekend.
20. Doctors are warning spending too much time in front of the computer.
21. She always did everything according the rules
22. Carry with your work while I'm away
23. I can't answer that puzzle; I give
24. We refuse talk to terrorists.
25. The human body is mademuscles and tissues"
26. How did it turn?
27. The meeting has been scheduled for tomorrow afternoon.
28. The name wasn't familiar me.
29. If something is on your mind, speak and let him know
30. He is extremely interested the house for sale.