5. Find adjectives in the article for the verbs and nouns in the list. What's the difference between the two adjectives made from stress?

Stress (noun) (x2)

Relax (verb)

Wake (verb)

Sleep (verb)

Power (noun)

Violence (noun)

Oil (noun)

We live in a stressful world, and daily life can sometimes make us feel tired, stressed or depressed. Some people go to the doctor's for help, others try alternative therapies, but the place to find a cure could be somewhere completely different: in the kitchen.

Dr Paul Clayton, a food expert from Middlesex University, says 'The brain is affected by what you eat and drink, just like every other part of your body. Certain types of food contain substances which affect how you think and feel.'

For example, food which is high in carbohydrates can make us feel more relaxed. It also makes us feel happy. Research has shown that people on diets often begin to feel a little depressed after two weeks because they are eating fewer carbohydrates.

On the other hand, food which is rich in protein makes us feel awake and focused. Research has shown that schoolchildren who eat a high-protein breakfast often do better at school than children whose breakfast is lower in protein. Also, eating the right kind of meal at lunchtime can make a difference if you haven an exam in the afternoon or a business meeting where you need to make some quick decisions. In an experiment for a BBC TV programme two chess players, both former British champions, had different meals before playing each other. Paul had a plate of prosciutto and salad (full of protein from the red meat), and his opponent, Terry, had pasta with a creamy sauce (full of carbohydrate). In the chess match Terry felt sleepy and took much longer than Paul to make decisions about what moves to make. The experiment was repeated several times with the same result. Another powerful mood food could become a secret weapon in the fight against crime. In Bournemouth in the south of England, where late-night violence can be a problem, some nightclub owners have come up with a solution. They give their clients free chocolate at the end of the night. The results have been dramatic, with a 60% reduction in violent incidents.

Why does chocolate make people less aggressive? First, it causes the brain to release feel-good chemicals called endorphins. It also contains a lot of sugar, which gives you energy, and can help stop late-night tiredness turning into aggression. These two things, together with a delicious taste, make chocolate a powerful mood changer.

Mood Food – What the experts say

- Blueberry and cocoa can raise concentration levels for up to five hours.
- Food that is high in protein helps your brain to work more efficiently.
- For relaxation and to sleep better, eat carbohydrates.
- Dark green vegetables (e.g. cabbage and spinach) and oily fish (e.g. salmon) eaten regularly can help to fight depression.

1. Read the text about Steve Anderson. Then listen to Part 1 of an interview with him, and number the photos in the order he mentions them.

STEVE ANDERSON has always had a passion for food.

He was first taught to cook by his mother, who is half Burmese. After studying physics at university, he got a holiday job helping on a cookery course in Italy, where he met several famous chefs. One of them, Alastair Little, later employed him as a trainee chef. Two years later he moved to Valencia in Spain and opened a restaurant, Seu Xerea, now one of the most popular restaurants in town.

PART 1

2. Now listen to Part 2 and answer the questions.

PART 2

- a. What does he say is the best and worst thing about running a restaurant?
- b. What's the main difference between British and Spanish customers?
- c. What kind of customers does he find difficult?
- d. How does he think eating habits in Spain are changing?

GRAMMAR – Present Simple & Continuous, action and non-action verbs.

1. Circle the form of the verbs Steve uses in the interview.
 - a. This week, for example, I cook / I'm cooking nearly every day. We usually close / are closing on Sundays and Mondays, but this Monday is a public holiday.
 - b. The British always say / are saying that everything is lovely.
 - c. Actually, I think I prefer / am preferring that honesty, because it helps us to know what people like.
 - d. Unfortunately, I think they get / they're getting worse. People eat / are eating more unhealthily.
2. Listen and check.

PRESENT SIMPLE

- We use the present simple for things that are always true or happen regularly.
I work in a bank. I don't work in a bank.
She studies Russian. She doesn't study Russian.
Do you live in France? Where does he live?
- We often use the present simple with adverbs of frequency, e.g. usually, never, or expressions of frequency, e.g. every day, once a week.
 - Adverbs of frequency go before the main verb, but after the verb to be.
I usually arrive late. I am usually late for work.
 - Expressions of frequency usually go at the end of the sentence or verb phrase.
I have English classes once a week.

PRESENT CONTINUOUS

- We use the present continuous for actions in progress at the time of speaking, e.g. things that are happening now or around now. These are normally temporary, not habitual actions.
I'm waiting for a friend. I'm not watching TV because I have a headache.
Is your sister still going out with Adam? No, she isn't. She isn't going out with anyone at the moment.
- We also use the present continuous for future arrangements.
My sister's coming next week to celebrate my birthday.
We're going to the beach for our next holidays.

ACTION AND NON-ACTION

- Verbs which describe actions, e.g. cook, make can be used in the present simple or continuous.
I'm making the lunch. I usually make lunch at the weekend.
- Verbs which describe states or feelings (not actions) e.g. love, need, understand, be, agree, believe, belong, depend, forget, hate, hear, know, like, matter, mean, prefer, realize, recognize, remember, seem, suppose are called non-action verbs. They are not usually used in the present continuous, even if we mean 'now'.
I am a teacher. NOT ~~I'm being a teacher.~~
John understands my English. NOT ~~John is understanding my English.~~
I know the answer to this question. NOT ~~I'm knowing the answer to this question.~~

VERBS THAT CAN BE BOTH ACTION AND NON-ACTION

- A Few verbs have an action and a non-action meaning. E.g. Have and Think.
I have a cat now = possession (non-action)
I can't talk now, I'm having lunch = an action.
I think this music is great = opinion (non-action)
What are you thinking about? = an action.
