Last year I was <sup>1</sup> ..... a trip to Paris and a friend of mine gave me the key to his flat there. I arrived late at night and went straight to the flat. The first problem was that the key didn't go <sup>2</sup> ..... the lock, but then I realised there were two locks. So I put the key into the other lock and tried to turn it, but I couldn't. I moved the key <sup>3</sup> ....., but still nothing. Then I turned it really hard and ... it broke. Half of the key was <sup>4</sup> ..... the lock. So I <sup>5</sup> ..... online and discovered a really <sup>6</sup> ..... hack. You put a drop of superglue <sup>7</sup> ..... the end of a match. Then you put the match onto the broken key, wait a minute or two and then pull the broken key out.

It's a(n) <sup>8</sup> ..... hack, but I didn't have any superglue with me. I walked <sup>9</sup> ..... the area, but no shops were open. In the end I didn't want to sleep <sup>10</sup> ....., so I found a hotel for the night!
