Reading

Read the five short news stories below. Choose from the articles (A to E) and complete the answer grid. The articles may be chosen more than once. One has been done for you as an example.

A. Two police officers were called 'heroes' after a dramatic snowstorm rescue. Tom Rogers and John Roberts were inspecting what looked like an abandoned car in deep snow. They opened the car door and found a pregnant woman, who had been on her way to hospital when she crashed. Officers Roberts and Rogers took Mrs Mill to hospital, where she gave birth to a healthy boy. She named him Thomas John, as a thank you to her police 'heroes'.

B. A man rescued by police has explained how he survived for two days covered with snow. John Fry fell into a deep snowdrift on his way home from the supermarket. Part of a tree had fallen only days before. This provided a shelter under the snow and gave Fry space to breathe. 'I was walking home with my groceries when the storm hit', said Fry. 'If it hadn't been for the tree and its pocket of air, I wouldn't be here. It was pretty cold but at least I had my groceries to eat.'

C. The fathers of three teenagers who were fined for throwing snowballs at police angrily told reporters it was 'ridiculous' for police to have taken action over such 'youthful high spirits'. A police officer said, 'It may seem a small thing but these kids throw snowballs at us as soon as the snow starts and they don't stop till the spring. Maybe now they'll stop.'

D. A student has described being trapped inside a car during the snow storm. Amy Teraura, from Tahiti, had never seen snow before, so didn't know what to expect. 'I thought I was going to die', she said. Ms Teraura, who was wearing only a t-shirt and jeans, was admitted to hospital for hypothermia. The hospital has issued a reminder to the public to always carry blankets and warm clothes in a vehicle in winter as the temperatures can kill.

E. Police have appealed for witnesses to a burglary at Hurst Farm, when tools and cash were taken. Two young teenage boys have already been arrested but police are hunting a third. 'We know there were three burglars as their footprints in the snow led from the road to the farm. The depth of the tracks shows they were about the same age,' said a spokesman.
