

PLANNED OR UNPLANNED? ★ ★ ★

We use the modal verb “will” or the expression “going to” to talk about events in the future. The difference relies on whether the event is planned or unplanned. Also, we can use the modal verb “will” in the negative form in following situations:

“Can you pick me up? I guess my car won’t work”

“I think these clothes won’t fit me.”

“I need a charger. My phone is dead and it won’t turn on!”

“I regret to inform you that your business plans won’t get the results that you expected”

Can you think of an example of any recent thing or situation in your life in which you can use this structure with “won’t”?

★ ★ ★ LISTENING!

Listen to two friends talking. What future events are planned and unplanned?

- A: I’m going to a party on Saturday!
B: Amazing! What are you going to wear?
A: I don’t know yet! I’m going to the clothes shop this afternoon. Will you mind come with me?
B: Sure! At what time are you going?
A: In some minutes, probably.
B: Oh, great! Wait a second, I will look for my coat and we can leave.
A: Perfect!

GOING TO

VS.

GOING TO + VERB

LISTENING COMPREHENSION! ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

You are going to listen to two friends at the clothes shop. Below, you will find a quiz about the content of the audio.

1. What is one of the friends looking for?
 - a. a nice dress
 - b. a night dress
 - c. a gown
2. Can they choose the dress they like?
 - a. No, they can't
 - b. Yes, they can
 - c. I don't know
3. Will the friends go together to the party?
 - a. Yes, they will
 - b. No, they won't.
 - c. They are not going to a party.
4. Where is one of the friends going to go?
 - a. To the museum
 - b. To a concert
 - c. To the cinema.
5. Can they try the dresses on?
 - a. Yes, they can
 - b. No, they can't
 - c. They don't want to.
6. What happens if they stretch the dresses?
 - a. They will have to buy them
 - b. They will have to try on another size.
 - c. They will have to leave the shop.

What do you think? Is clothes size a problem for many people? How do you think people feel when there aren't clothes for them at the shops?

Does it happen to you when you buy clothes?

What's a possible solution for that?

