Review of Conditionals: Zero, First, Second, and Third

Conditional sentences are used to express possible or hypothetical situations and their consequences. They consist of two parts: the 'if' clause (the condition) and the 'then' clause (the result). There are four main types of conditionals: zero, first, second, and third. Understanding how to use these different conditional forms is crucial for effective communication.

Fill in the Blank: Fill in the blank with the correct words.

If it __ outside, I will take an umbrella.

If the weather __ nice, we could go for a picnic.

If I __ more time, I would study for the exam.

If it __ raining, the game would have been canceled.

If you __ hungry, there are snacks in the kitchen.

Word bank: is, had, were, rains, are

Multiple Choice Questions: Choose the correct answer from the choices for each question.

Which conditional form is used to express general truths or scientific facts?

A. Zero conditional

B. First conditional

C. Second conditional

D. Third conditional

LIVEWORKSHEETS

Which conditional form is used to express a hypothetical situation in the present or future?

A. Zero conditional

B. First conditional

C. Second conditional

D. Third conditional

Which conditional form is used to express a hypothetical situation in the past?

A. Zero conditional

B. First conditional

C. Second conditional

D. Third conditional

Which conditional form is used to express uncertainty or improbability?

A. Zero conditional

B. First conditional

C. Second conditional

D. Third conditional

Which conditional form is used to express a condition that is unlikely to be fulfilled?

A. Zero conditional

B. First conditional

C. Second conditional

D. Third conditional

LIVEWORKSHEETS

Open Ended Questions: Answer the following questions in complete sentences:

Explain the difference between the zero conditional and the first conditional.

Provide an example of a second conditional sentence.

Describe a situation where you would use a third conditional sentence.

LIVEWORKSHEETS