In my family, we love to do many fun activities together. Some of these things we do all the time, some we never do, and others we do only sometimes. Let me tell you about them!

We always eat honey pumpkin during Holy Week. It's a special tradition that we all look forward to every year. My mother prepares it with so much love, and it tastes delicious!

For birthday parties, we always eat rice and chicken. It's a family favorite, and my father loves to cook it for us. Birthdays are so much fun with tasty food and lots of laughter.

We sometimes have big parties. These parties are usually for special occasions like anniversaries or when someone achieves something great. My sister and I love decorating the house with balloons and streamers.

On Sundays, we never invite our relatives over. Sundays are usually quiet days for just our immediate family, where we relax and spend time together.

In September, we always go to the parades. We dress up in our best clothes, wave flags, and cheer for the performers. It's exciting to see the colorful floats and hear the lively music.

But there's one thing we never do: we never have family reunions. Our extended family lives far away, so we don't get to see them often. Instead, we keep in touch through phone calls and video chats.

Mark with an X how frequently the family do the activities:

Activity	Always	Sometimes	Never
Eat honey pumpkin on Holy Week
Eat rice and chicken at birthday parties
Have parties
Invite relatives on Sundays
Go to parades in September
Have family reunions

Identify the celebration. Write the name of each celebration:

Put numbers 1, 2 and 3 to represent the order in which each activity occurred.

TEXT 1: On a sunny day, Mary and her family decided to have a picnic in the park. First, they prepared a delicious basket with sandwiches, fruits, and juice. After enjoying their meal, they decided to go to a parade happening nearby. Finally, they ended the day by visiting their relatives who lived close to the park

TEXT 2: Carlos and his family were excited about their family reunion. They started the day by making tamales together in the kitchen. After that, they had a big party with music and dancing. Later, everyone enjoyed talking about old times.

TEXT 3: Lucy and her family planned a fun day by the river. First, they spent the morning playing and splashing in the water. For lunch, they had a picnic where they enjoyed eating rice with chicken. To end the day, they shared a special dessert: honey pumpkin, which everyone loved.
